Maintains That Lithuania Committed a Breach of Neutrality in Permitting the Soviet Army to Make Use of Lithuanian Territory for Its Passage and the Establishment of a Military Base—Bolshevik Troops Cooperated With the Lithuanians in the Attack Upon Sejny.

that while the Po armies were engaged in the fighting, the Soviet Government, treating before the Russian soviet forces the Lithuanian government as concluded an armistice with the Lithuanian government at Moscow authorizing the soviet army to make use of Lithuanian territory for the purpose of attacking Poland and of a military base. Thus, the note points out, was a breach of neutrality. The note concludes:

"Later when the Polish armies were faced with open and direct aggression from the Lithuanians. The Soviet Government, which was not only unable to assist the Lithuanians, but allied with the red army and that army's operations against the Polish army, was the tool of the soviet government. Owing to the fraternal relations, which during the war had been established between the Polish and Lithuanian peoples, the Polish government would have recourse to the aid of arms only with great reluctance."

The supreme council awarded Poland by the 1919 Lithuanian troops occupied the evacuated territory and committed exorbitant demands for compensation. Being faithful to Poland, when the bolshevik invasion was repulsed the Polish government in London refused the Lithuanian government sent a note to the Polish Government, declaring it did not intend to recognize the Lithuanian government, the supreme council and asking the Poles to take the necessary measures to prevent any contact between the Lithuanian troops and the bolsheviks. The Polish troops have tried throughout to avoid shedding blood, but on Sept. 2 a detachment of Polish cavalry occupying Sejmy was attacked by Lithuanians and forced to evacuate the town, losing four dead. The Lithuanian army then occupied Suwalki and advanced upon Augustow without declaring war. It is believed that the Lithuanian government is anxious to negotiate with the Soviet Union in order to prevent the evacuation of the Polish army from the country, but the Soviet government means at the same time to abandon its enterprise, thus preventing the Polish army from being under the painful necessity of waging war against a neighbor.
